TOWN YOUNG LADY ENTERS MATRIMONY

At four p.m. on Wednesday last, the Rev. W. J. Huston, pastor of the United Church, joined in holy matrimony at the home of the bride's parents on Fourth avenue east, Miss Mary Elizabeth, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fish, to Mr. Frederick, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey, of Sharon, Ont., before a large number of immediate relatives and friends.

The bride looked charming in gown in an ensemble of soft white lace and wore hat and shoes to match. The young couple were supported by Miss Margaret Fish, sister of the bride, and Mr. H. Ramsey, brother of the groom, and were the recipients of a large number of valuable wedding gifts.

Immediately following the ceremony, the newly-weds left by auto to pay a visit to the parents of the bridegroom, at Sharon, Ontario as well as States points, after which they plan to return to Butte, Alta., to make their home early in August. More congratulations.

Mayor Forster's Appreciation

In view of the success which attended our Dominion Day celebration on July 1st, I desire to thank the members of the committee, as well as the other individuals and organizations who so loyally supported me in making the day a success. Although finances are a secondary consideration in the annual celebration, I am pleased to announce a small surplus and I trust that, in years to come, Wainwright will continue to celebrate this foremost day in the history of Canada.

M. L. FORSTER,

Mayor.

The committee on Public Works presented the report hereto appended and, on motion, the report of the committee on Public Works was accepted and incorporated in the proceedings and the committee authorized to proceed with the work as outlined in the report on the system as set forth.

After repeated trials, we decided that it was impossible to put our streets in condition with the use of the light maintainers belonging to the town. The work required a much heavier machine and, through the kindness of Reeve Mills of the Municipal District of Gilt Edge, we obtained the heavy grader belonging to his division. With this grader, most of the streets, which were in bad condition, and the North and East approaches to the town were graded and are in excellent condition.

It is the intention of this committee gang on the C.N.R.) while at his work on the coal dock lost his balance and was thrown violently down into the pockets of the coal-shoot. His fellow workmen at once rushed to his aid, and he was taken to the yard office and Dr. Wallace immediately called.

The injured man was breathing his last and upon the arrival of the doctor it was found that he had sustained a severe fracture at the base of the skull, and, shortly after, the doctor ordered the removal of the body to the funeral parlors. An inquest will probably be held to-day to enquire into the circumstances surrounding the accident and death.

The late Mr. Ward came to Wainwright, and worked here in the yards in the early days. Some time in the fall of 1919 he moved with his family to Edmonton, and has since been employed with the B. & B. There are left to mourn, besides his wife and son Charles (with the C.N. freight dept. in Edmonton), another son Cecil, who carries on his dental practice at Leduc. The relatives were immediately notified.

CROP REPORT SHOWS PROSPECTS REAL GOOD

General—In the Prairie Provinces cool weather and heavy fairly general rains have promoted good growth. All crops. Wheat is now heading out over the entire prairies with Manitoba the furthest advanced, and prospects for a good crop are quite encouraging. In Quebec the indications are that the hay crop will be under average. Continued favourable weather is benefiting other crops. In Ontario all crops are progressing satisfactorily, and the outlook is for heavy yields except in the eastern section where conditions are average. In the Maritime Provinces favourable weather is promoting good growth. In British Columbia indications are for above average yields of crops, generally. Details follow:—

Alberta—In northeastern area cool weather has retarded growth slightly. Wheat is heading with straw fairly short. Moisture is sufficient and damage is negligible. In the southeastern area warmer weather and rainfalls have promoted satisfactory growth of all crops. About 80 per cent. of the wheat is now headed, with straw a good length. Pasture is plentiful. In the western area crops are progressing satisfactorily with ample moisture. Damage is negligible except in the Cardston area where there has been some hail damage. Considerable leaf damage to sugar beets by wet worms is now believed checked and damaged fields are expected to recover. The first alfalfa and sweet clover crops have been cut, the yield is heavy. Pasture is plentiful. Saskatchewan—In the northern areas rains have been general during the past week and clear warm weather is needed. Wheat is practically all in shot blade with about 20 per cent. headed. Coarse grains are making progress and pasturage is good. Due to inadequate moisture crops in south central and south western areas show effects of the hot weather and high winds during the past week and rain is needed in some districts where wheat is rapidly heading, with straw inclined to be short.

Two Elephants

Trees and wild-rose hedges and the scent of new-mown hay! A bend in the road that tilted the little gray car on two wheels. A signpost which they skinned as they slipped past into a narrow road that wandered between deep hedgerows! A swish as the limousine flashed along the high way they had just left—wild-gooseing after nothing!

"Slipped 'em!"

Joe Short slowed down and crammed chewing gum into his mouth. Like a lazy tourist the car coasted along the quiet road. A great peace drifted over Sam Lemon at the vision of a large bony woman sitting at a crockery-laden table, and waiting—waiting.

"What now?" he asked happily.

"Ditch her and walk to the nearest train." Joe Short grinned, now in excellent humor. "She's not my car. Picked her off the curb yesterday. Hello!"

There was an obstruction upon the narrow, snaky road, in front. Sam Lemon rubbed his cheek and gazed at it. Even Joe Short's working jaws stopped still in mid-mastication. They were neither behemoths nor anthropophagi. But just elephants. Two! They walked side by side, under the green ceiling of leaves, lifting their great feet carefully, as though the road was a jungle full of cobra and fer-de-lance. Ahead of them trundled three red-and-blue wagons, and by their side a yellow dog ran on three legs.

"It's a circus, by thunder!" said Joe Short.

Mr. Sam Lemon chanced to look behind. He croaked one word, and the Confugal Kim grew wet again in his hand.

"Dane!"

Too soon had they given the cry of safety. The limousine had turned and found them. With unhurrying chase and unperturbed pace, it closed in, Fatikins, who had lost his hat, at the wheel, the dame looking as if she didn't know him. The little gray car bugled to the obstruction ahead. Its demon driver, more like a baboon than ever, with his chewing gum, pouted in his cheek, had seen one slim chance. If the circus moved over, the little gray car could slip through, while the limousine could not.

"Mind the elephants, for the love of Mike!" groaned Sam Lemon. A vivid imagination had always prevented him from reaching the highest flights of his profession. It began to play like sparks in his brain. Some Hindu rajah, perhaps, had wished a curse upon the necklace he hid. Elephants came from India, didn't they? Sacred elephants, maybe, and Joe Short was pushing the nose of his car against their legs.

Sam Lemon tightly shut his eyes once more.

Inside the little caravan, the only sound was the steady crunch of the yellow wheels on the grit of the road and the clip-clop of old Martha, the gray mare, who had a shoe loose. The elephants behind moved noiselessly, save for a little gurgling conversation with each other. "Daddy," Sibley finished laboriously writing with the stub of a pencil, and mamma looked up from her knitting.

"Don't take on so, John!" she chided gently. "There's nothing so bad that it mightn't be worse."

Daddy Sibley sat down to the mug of cocoa which the stout, bustling little boy set before him. Mamma was still apple-cheeked and bright-eyed, but Daddy, born in the sawdust and who had cracked a whip in the ring for forty years, had gone all to pieces. John Sibley, of Sibley's Olympian Circus, once known on every green and fair ground, was no more. Only John Sibley, bankrupt, remained. The trees were green and the wind blew on the heath. But Sibley's Olympian Circus—what was left of it—was trailing to the nearest town where an auctioneer awaited it and the vultures were gathered. An old nag was limping to the knacker's yard.

"We'll get used to a house," said Mamma Sibley bravely, though some thing like terror flitted through her eyes. "Lots of folk do. With windows and doors wide open. We shall never know the difference, John. We'll get used to it."

"Aye, you'd get used to anything, you would." Daddy Sibley let his hand drop to Mamma's arm for a moment in a caress. They had lived in that caravan, with its scroiled ceiling and chintz curtains, for forty years, and never had a rough word. Young Fred who was in Italy with Signor Mosetti and his Flying Horses and little Lena, who was the darling of the Cirque Royale, in Paris, had both been born there. What would they say when they came back and found their Daddy and mamma living in a house?

"There's a motor car wanting to pass," mamma said suddenly, looking through the open front of the van to the driver of the forlorn trail. "Can't Tom Murch hear it?"

"There's little room for him to draw aside. Hi, there!" Daddy Sibley suddenly found his showman's bull voice. "Keep off them elephant. Will ye mind what I say?"

The two men in the motor car took no notice. They were hooting like lunatics and pushing at the hind quarters of Aggie whose gashed foot made her short tempered. The red head of Tom Murch peered round the front wagon, and the cavalcade came to a slow stop. There were two motor cars, now, Daddy Sibley saw, and the second was a big, swell one with a plump excited driver in it, and sitting beside him was a woman who was laughing as though she was smiled and happy.

"There's only room for the motor car," Daddy Sibley roared. "Hardly that. Come on, mister, you'll get past."

Aggie disagreed. Being an old lady who objected to her hind legs being poked, she broke the two-inch rope which tethered her to the caravan, and, turned to survey the enemy. Simultaneously, Joe Short "stepped on it" but too late. Only the rear wheels whirled, with the hood of the little car buried in Aggie's outraged chest, and her head and trunk hanging over a gibbering Sam Lemon. The trunk raised itself and snaked downward, missing Sam Lemon by inches but hitting Joe Short a blow that all but broke his neck. Like a thrown cask, the car leaped off the roadway.

There was fog and wild parsley in the ditch and also some four feet of green-slimed water. Both Sam Lemon and his demon driver thrown neatly clear, were coused in the latter. But only Sam Lemon, unharmed by Aggie's trunk, crawled out with any haste.

Ellen Mellish, sitting by the chauffeur's seat of the limousine, with her hands clasped tightly, saw Mr. Lemon green with terror and scum, rise like Aphrodite from the ditch. At the same time, the seat by her side became vacant. Some words were hurriedly flung at her.

"He's my meat, Ellen. Don't let the circus people interfere on any account."

She could see him, waist-deep in the ditch, hanging on to Sam Lemon's legs, but Sam Lemon wriggled free. Through the forest of nettles, they scuffled together and then, in a field of green oats. Out of the deep prairie it was sometimes Sam Lemon's head that came sometimes James Mellish's sometimes both, Mellish hugging, Lemon butting with a hard-looking skull.

"Come back!" Ellen sang out sharply to Tom Murch and Daddy Sibley.

Quite clearly, she comprehended that it was a primeval combat on Jim's part at least. He wanted that necklace as Arthur's knights wanted the grail. He had driven like Jehu for it, he who had not driven for years. He had pushed a big policeman who had wanted to join the chase, from the running board. A little later, he had scattered three more and smashed into fragments the butcher boy's tricycle van they had miss ed hitting the bandits with. With a blood-running nose and no collar, he fought for the necklace, rolling with his quarry through the grass through the hedge and down to the ditch again, the little bald patch on the top of his head pink, his breath wheezing in unison with the other man's. They were in the ditch; Jim's superior weight was telling. His opponent was under water save for convulsively kicking legs. Jim was holding him, sitting on him, riding his pockets.

He came, at last, rather groggily, bearing a glittering object and a handful of weeds. Wistfully, his red-brown eyes shone.

"Confugal Kim, Ellen. Hope you like it. It's a real name. Confound superstition of course. Suit ruined. New one, too. Quite an adventure. Car bandits, circus, elephants and all! Like a blessed movie!"

"Put it round my neck, Jim—now!" "Good old elephant!" His hand was trembling. "They'd have got past but for that. Like it? Better than—"

"Flowers—yes. Flowers don't last. They're not meant to. They serve their purpose and then they're finished. The old circus people are busy with the bandits, Jim. Will you kiss your filthy pig of a wife?"

"Pretty little pig!" said James Mellish unsteadily, with his eyes burning. Behind the dignified gloom of Trevor's shop in St. James, there was another chamber, laid with a soft carpet and furnished austere but grandly with shining Victorian furniture and old paintings. Here the roar of the town came in a faint sleepy hum as though specially laid on as a lullaby for the big black Augusta cat that slept on the window sill.

Ellen scratched the head of the Augusta cat, as she and her husband waited there, in the opulent silence.

"It's funny about those dear old Sibley's," she said. "Not wanting to leave their caravan and live in a decent house. But I will say their caravan is like a new pin, and mamma's tea was delicious. I'm tired of caravanning, Jim. I want to go and live in a Tudor house."

"Right," said James Mellish unemotionally. But Ellen, watching, Ellen saw his eyes glitter at her and then fall to the necklace.

"Hanged if I know what I'll do with two elephants and a bit of circus," he said.

There was a silence. Ellen would have fingered in his. It remained, squeezed tight.

"I want to be sorry even for that"

QUALITY IS FEATURED

IN HOG MARKETING

The quality of the hog supply was probably the best in the experience of the industry in Canada. At the same time there is considerable room for a more intelligent application of breeding principles and a better control in the matter of the usage of a plentiful and cheap supply of various pig feeding material.

It is most encouraging to note, observes the twelfth annual report on the Origin and Quality of Commercial Live Stock Marketed in Canada in 1931, issued by the Dominion Live Stock Branch, that, as compared with the supply of 1930, there were approximately 43,000 more select bacon hogs and 210,000 more bacon hogs, out of an increase in all grades amounting to 342,000 head. There was some increase in the number of really good sows marketed, no doubt the result of the active demand for breeding stock. This is substantiated by the fact that the entire increase in number one sows went to stockyards and the number of sows marketed at packing plants was less than a year ago. There was a very marked curtailment in the movement of number two sows, as compared with a year ago, and as well the number of stags was cut down to a low point.

Butcher hogs and heavy hogs showed a fairly normal increase, considering the liberal volume of feed available, and there was a fairly normal increase in the number of lights and feeders marketed. As a matter of fact, the supply of that class could be considered as very moderate, considering that during the greater part of the year the prospects for finished hogs were not particularly encouraging.

THEN THE SUN CAME SMILING THROUGH (By Nelson S. Bond)

Everyone had the blues this morning. The sky caused it, for when we first awoke the ceiling was overcast with a dim greyish mist that filtered the wan sunlight weakly and slowly. The newsboy on the corner refused me his customary greeting as I came to the office. The elevator boy in our building lacked his usual smile. The salesmen on their daily rounds were listless in their efforts, and I myself was not too bright and cheerful.

And then, about noontime, there came a rift in the sullen clouds overhead, and suddenly the sun came through the gloom and flooded the streets below. And with its coming, our little world sprang into sudden activity. The figures in the street seemed to move more energetically; the bustle of city traffic began to make itself heard; and here and there I caught the sound of laughter. When I went out to lunch the elevator boy grinned at me. The newsboy on the corner called a delayed greeting as I passed. And the work came back to life again.

I thought later—how little it takes to sink us mortals into the depths of despondency. The sun refuses to come out in the morning; a few miles close a statistician frightens the brokers—and phfft! we are lost in despair!

But, sooner or later, the sun is sure to break through the clouds of doubt and worry. And we are all going to wonder, then, how it was that we allowed ourselves to become so disconsolate and morbid!

Cheer up! In a very short while it will seem very funny that for a short time the sun forgot to smile.

THE SPICE OF STRIFE

"Seasoned troops?" cried the ex-soldier. "Why, seasoned troops are those mustered by the officers and peppered by the enemy!"

—and a-salted by the authorities. Finished the cop, as he gently prodded the speaker with his night-stick.

THAT SUMMER TAN—GET IT CAUTIOUSLY

Has your nose peeled yet? Now that vacation time has rolled around again, many of our friends and acquaintances are parading reddened or tanned skins before our envious eyes, and are taunting us for our pale faces and unbrowned arms.

But—be not deceived! The rich color of a suntanned face is not to be gained too quickly, or too carelessly. All of us have experienced sunburn at some time in our lives, and most of us have been fortunate enough to escape with a mere unpleasantness for a day or so. But sunburn can be, and too often is, a very painful and serious condition.

The burn that the falsely benevolent summer sun gives us is the equivalent of a first or second class green burn such as might be caused by a hot iron or scalding water. And the effect of a severe sunburn is comparable to the effect of either of these two.

As in the treatment of such burns, any oily substance placed in direct contact with the skin will soothe and heal the soreness. If the severity of the burn demands bandages, it is well to wrap lightly powdered bandages loosely around the tender spot, as tight wrappings may tend to make a swollen condition intolerable.

So beware when you set yourself to get that healthy coat of tan. See to it that you expose yourself to the full rays of the sun for no more than a half an hour at a time until the first coat of red has turned brown. Then lengthen your periods of exposure discreetly. You will not be dissatisfied with the result, and, what is more you will have no painful hours of remorse for your carelessness.

To remove coffee stains, cover the spot with the yolk of an egg to which has been added an equal amount of carbon tetrachloride. The mixture should be well stirred before using. After the spot has soaked a few minutes, wash out the mixture with warm water and, while still moist, iron on the wrong side of the cloth.

When preparing fresh peaches or tomatoes for table use, the skins can be easily removed by firmly pressing the back of a knife against the fruit and drawing it from the blossom toward the stem end. This will bruise the skin sufficiently so that it can be peeled off without cutting.

Would You Like to be Blind ?

IMAGINE YOURSELF TO BE BLIND, AND BEING ASKED TO BUY A MOTOR CAR, OR SILVERWARE, OR CLOTHING, OR A PAIR OF SHOES, OR A CLOCK OR A REFRIGERATOR, OR A SUITE OF FURNITURE. IMAGINE YOURSELF TO BE SET DOWN IN A MAIN STREET WITH STORES ON BOTH SIDES OF IT, AND BEING BIDDEN TO PURCHASE THE THING OR THINGS ON YOUR SHOPPING LIST.

Being blind, you wouldn't know which store or stores to enter; and even if you did find yourself in the right class of store you wouldn't be able to select intelligently what you were bidden buy. You wouldn't know anything about values.

It would be cruel to send a blind person to do selective buying.

You would be like a blind person, when you start out to buy something, if there were no advertisements in the newspapers and magazines which you read.

Advertisements are like radio-visuals: They enable you to see in your home what is in stores, what stores have, what you plan to buy; also, they give descriptions, tell you prices, and answer many of your questions.

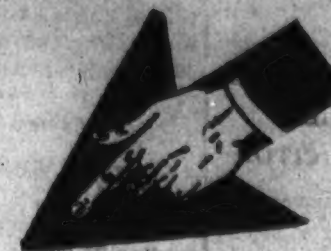

Pre-informed—in your home—about goods of desire, you can go shopping confidently—to known places of supply, and you know how to examine the wanted article and what to pay for it.

Advertisements save you time and safeguard you against the danger of mischoice.

What is advertised regularly is trustworthy, and is good value.

BE GUIDED BY ADVERTISEMENTS WHEN YOU PLAN TO SPEND MONEY FOR THINGS TO WEAR, TO EAT, TO GIVE YOUR HOME EASEMENTS AND COMFORTS, TO SAVE YOUR TIME, TO INCREASE THE OUTPUT OF YOUR LABOR, OR OF YOUR SOIL OR FLOCKS OR HERDS OR ORCHARDS; OR TO PROTECT YOUR LIFE, YOUR HEALTH, YOUR PROPERTY OR MONEY.

WHAT ADVERTISERS DO AND SPEND IN THIS AND IN OTHER NEWSPAPERS TO GET YOUR ATTENTION AND FAVOR SHOULD HAVE YOUR WARM APPROVAL, FOR WHAT MAY BE EXPENSE TO THEM REPRESENTS ECONOMY FOR YOU.

MAIL AND*FAREWELLJust a word of greeting to my large family of subscribers, advertisees and friends at large. I feel quite unworthy and incompetent to even attempt to follow in the editorial footsteps of my highly esteemed predecessor, Mr. Walter J. Huntingford, who is known from coast to coast as a gentleman of the first rank in editorial ability among his brethren in the newspaper fraternity.In the course of years he has built up a business here in Wainwright, consisting of one of the finest buildings with a splendid equipment, that can be found among country newspapers. The success with which he has met can only come through courage and hard work. He has boasted every worthy interest and deserves
credit for having contributed strength energy and ability to the building of a great community, such as you have, surrounding Wainwright. While "Walter" and his esteemed wife and family will remain in the community,
his influence behind the "Wainwright Star" will be missed. On the front page you will see a cut of his face.
I heard his wife tell him, "he ought to get a new one." Well, everybody is used to it now, so let it go at that.
As for the new editor, he steadfastly denies that he is two-faced, for if so,
he would likely present the other one.
Some years ago, the new editor,
who is really a minister by profession
very courageously carried a bit of copy into the office of the editor of a country newspaper, with the request that it would be a good idea to publish it. The editor, who happened to be a man weighing 300 pounds or so, glanced at the manuscript and promptly gave a grunt of disgust and consigned it to the wastebasket. Since that time I have traveled far and wide to find a small, hungry-looking editor; one that I could get by the coat collar and compel him to publish my productions, but I have never found one of such dimensions, so the next best thing for me to do was to lease a paper and then the suffering public will be compelled to read some of my chatter.Among the multiplicity of things that Walter Huntingford has tried to beat into my head the last few days is, "30" to be used to conclude—the end, or something like that—you know, something like a minister saying the benediction. In these days when people want a minister to be brief, I think I will say, "now in conclusion friends, my third and last point is, etc., etc." and then I will yell "thirty!"Now honestly, my third and last point is this, I am happy indeed, to be located in this town and community and it will be our desire to serve
all of you to the best of our ability.
If you have any news, please call us and we will be more than pleased to spread it, and if you have tim-call at the office and get acquainted.Come in, anyway!

Yours for continued service,

W. H. ZOOK

Since May 1st, 1916, it has at all times been with a real affection that the writer has attempted week by week to chronicle the events of this wide community which the Wainwright Star has endeavored to serve.The vicissitudes of life which are met by a country editor are many and greatly varied, and although at all times we have had no qualms of conscience with regard to our friendships, our business relations, our little differences, and so forth, we have attempted to the very best of our ability to do the impossible—to be all things to all men—and how success has followed this effort our ever-increasing circle of friends can testify.Owing to a period of poor health,
it has now been necessary to relinquish to other (and possibly more capable) hands the management of the Star, and in this respect we take pleasure in verbally introducing our successor, Mr. W. H. Zook, formerly of Michigan, Arizona, and other places in the States, as well as several centers in Canada.Mr Zook will, we are sure, carry on the work begun so many years ago by the writer, to the end that Wainwright and its environs may at all times be blessed to the world as a place of which it may well be said
—"As a city which is founded upon a hill, its light cannot be hid."

W. J. HUNTINGFORD

BUY NOWSpeaking at a dinner tendered to a large group of Kingston, Ont., businessmen, H. E. Stephenson, of the McKim Agency, told his audience
some simple but important truths regarding the building of business, in an informative address, he stated that the best way to sell a product was to tell the truth about it, because the public read the newspaper advertisements as a guide to the daily purchasing. Then he went on to give some advice to these Kingston businessmen, which advice is applicable to the businessmen of any community. He said:"If you have a local newspaper, use it, even if you are located in one corner of the country and can only get value from a part of the circulation. Tell your story from time to time and you will profit by it. The newspaper is an important factor in knitting together a community, and to the extent that you can strengthen it you will be making the paper a stronger medium of your own and the manufacturers advertising.""Too many merchants endeavor to sidestep seeing a newspaper advertising man or publisher for fear that they expect them to cough up for some advertising and too many publishers keep away from the merchants because they feel that that is the merchant's attitude.""This is absolutely wrong, as the interests of the two are so bound up with the growth or prosperity of the district that they should work together at all times.—Ex.BUY-BYE BLUES"Bye now!"
They told us a year ago.
"That's how We'll end the depression." So
Our family agreed "All right, we'll go Buy now!"By now
Our family has reached the end—
And how!
We haven't a single friend,
We cannot borrow, we cannot lend
A penny!
Bye, now!
It's stranded us high and dry.
We saw
To Fate—no use to cry—
"We'll take a gun and we'll all go by-

MUSICAL EDUCATIONAs every thinking parent knows, their children's school education is only the ground-work of the education necessary to them in their progress through life. They are always being educated,—wisely or unwisely.
In that regard, their use of leisure-time is all-important, and the study and practice of music provides everybody who undertakes it with a hobby
—even if it be nothing more—which can occupy inviolably those leisure hours, the use of which has made all the difference to the happiness of millions of men and women.Parents who are inclined to think little of music as a subject of value to their children, think of music less well than it deserves to be thought of. It is not merely a pastime for an idle hour—though it can very usefully be that. Still less is study of it a waste of time because it will lead to no practical advantage for the boy or girl. Even as to practical advantage there is this to be said for it—
that a knowledge of music, some accomplishment, say, in playing or singing, very often opens a door that leads the young musician into pleasant places. There is social advantage in it, new companionship, desirable
surroundings, happy experiences, often are met with as a result of young people's ability to make music and their consequent ability to interest those about them. This is certainly something worth the thought of parents hoping for their children's welfare. And there are many other ways in which study of music is the
of practical advantage which sometimes seems to be overlooked.Mr Chas. Hutchison is away east to spend a short vacation.PUBLIC NOTICEMUNICIPAL DISTRICT OF LIFE INSURANCEWhatever goes by the board in these times of stress and depression,

the man who is determined to fight
along with the world back to normality will maintain his life insurance as the most precious asset he possesses.Hundreds of thousands of families have lost their stocks, sacrificed their bonds and bitten deeply into their savings. The one real backing they now possess is their life insurance policies and the security those policies represent.To drop them is to surrender the last line of defence.For a man can face the world with an empty belly and a sad heart so long as he has some little financial force behind him.But it is a rare man who can face
the world with an empty belly and a sad heart and nothing behind him but the flimsy promises of chance.It is a great temptation for those who are hard pressed to let their policies lapse with the idea of securing new ones "later". The point is that we are all getting older. If those new policies are ever taken out it will be at a tremendously increased cost.Maintain your life insurance if you maintain nothing else.—Ex.Boiled linseed oil and Spanish

THE APPOINTMENT OF*A NEW
FORD DEALER*A. DUPRE

FORD DEALER

Second Avenue

Wainwright

THIS appointment is made necessary by the growing number of Ford owners in this territory and is in keeping with the established Ford policy of rendering an increasing measure of service to every purchaser of a Ford car.This policy is founded on the belief that a sale does not complete the transaction between us and the buyer but establishes a new obligation on us to see that the car gives good service.We are as much interested in your economical operation of the car as you are in our economical manufacture of it.Every Authorized Ford Dealer has pledged himself to the carrying out of this policy. Throughout the entire life of the car, the constant endeavor will be to help you get the greatest possible use over the longest period of time at a minimum of trouble and expense.The mechanics of all Ford dealers have been thoroughly trained in schools conducted by the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Limited, and they use tools and machinery made specially for servicing the Ford car. When replacements are necessary, the parts used are identical in size and quality with those from which your car was originally assembled in the Ford factory. The charge for these parts is low, in accordance with the Ford policy, and all labor is billed at a standard flat rate.
No matter what the job—large or small—you will find the Ford dealer equipped to handle it for you promptly, at a fair price, and in an intelligent, businesslike manner. The well-ordered cleanliness of the display room and

CONTINUATION OF CEMETERY NOW BEING HEDGED & BEAUTIFIED

tee to gravel a considerable area, depending to a considerable extent upon the disposition of our taxpayers to work out their arrears of taxes. The grading did not entail an outlay of more than $15.00 and the graveling should be equally easy on the treasury. Many of our taxpayers appreciate the opportunity of thus working out their taxes and the streets will be put in such shape as to make them easy to maintain.

It is the intention of this committee to gravel Main street from Sixth Avenue north, the East and North approaches and Queen Street between Sixth and Ninth Avenues. We would also be pleased to be enabled to gravel Sixth Avenue west of Main street, but this will depend entirely on the amount of labor obtainable under the conditions above mentioned. All of which is respectfully submitted.

The committee on Parks and Cemetery presented the report as here-to attached and, on motion, the report was accepted and incorporated in the proceedings of the meeting.

That we have hired a man for the last fifteen days at $2.00 per day of eight hours to remove surplus earth around the graves; also had a mowing machine to go over the roads as it did the work much cheaper and better. We also had a small gate erected at the Catholic cemetery, this will supply a long felt want since the big gates have to be locked. We have the ground prepared for a caragana hedge along the north and east sides of the Protestant cemetery and along the east and south of the Catholic cemetery; a distance of approximately 1687 feet. I am glad to say that the public are taking a much greater interest in beautifying their lots. Up to the present our expenses have been around $60.00.

An oral report was submitted by the special committee appointed by the Mayor to interview the executive of the Curling club.

On motion, the Secretary-Treasurer was authorized to write the Wainwright Curling Club that, upon their raising $1000.00 by public subscription, the Town of Wainwright will transfer to Trustees of the Curling Club lots 14 and 15 in block 14 to enable the club to commence construction of a rink and to enable the club to raise by way of mortgage, sufficient funds, not to exceed $1000. for the completion of the rink and, on completion of the rink, the Town of Wainwright will accept a re-transfer of the property from these Trustees with the insertion of a clause in the transfer by which the Trustees undertake to indemnify the transferees against loss by the Town of Wainwright being required to pay the said mortgage or any interest thereunder.

On motion, the Committee on Assessment, Property and By-Laws was authorized to arrange prices on the individual lots contained in the sale of lots to be held on July 28th, under tax recovery proceedings and to arrange terms on which the sale of these lots would be conducted.

The summer steamship service from Vancouver to northern British Columbia and Alaskan ports by the Canadian National Steamships will go into effect June 15th, with the S.S. Prince George making the first sailing. This will be followed by the S.S. Prince Rupert on June 15th, and

CUTTING & STACKING ALFALFA

(Experimental Farms Note)

It is generally agreed that the correct time to cut alfalfa is when the new shoots appear from the crown and before these young shoots show sufficient growth to be cut by the mower.

If the basal shoots are allowed to show considerable growth before cutting the second crop tonnage will be reduced materially.

Experimental data show that the protein content of alfalfa decreases considerably as the plants reach 100 per cent bloom or full maturity. The maximum protein content, digestibility and palatability are generally reached when the plant is from 20 to 40 per cent in bloom. When left until the plant reaches full bloom before cutting, it becomes woody, coarse, and the hay is less nutritious.

Owing to its high moisture content and heavy yields, difficulty is often experienced in properly curing alfalfa. If left in the swath to cure after cutting, the sun will shrivel the leaves and retard curing. It is essential to save the leaves, not only to aid curing but because approximately 45 per cent of the food value is contained in them.

At the Dominion Experimental Station, Morden, the length of time the hay is left in the swath depends upon weather conditions. The hay is always raked into small windrows, while green. The use of a side delivery rake is preferable to the ordinary 'camp rake'.

The hay is left to partly cure in small windrows, but while still green is rolled in small coils, and left until ready for stacking. Alfalfa should never be stacked if it contains external moisture, such as dew or rain, as these will invariably cause mold and mustiness.

A much better quality hay results when the alfalfa is stacked than if it is hauled into the barn. If put up in long narrow stacks it can be stacked slightly on the green side without impairing the quality of the hay.

CONTROLLING CANADA THISTLE

Canada thistle is a perennial possessing a deeper and more robust root system than most other weeds. In addition it has surprising ability to send up new growth from points on the root system which are buried deeply. To destroy the plant, the root must be strangled.

Special methods employed to control this weed such as spraying, shredding and cutting, when the stem is hollow, have proved neither practical nor effectual. Experiments with sprays at the Brandon Experimental Farm have shown only a slight delay to be of much service but at a cost prohibitive except for small patches. It is therefore evident that to fight the rapidly increasing menace due to this weed on prairie farms, that farmers must resort to a well-planned combination of cultural and cropping practices and apply them thoroughly.

The following methods have been used for the control of Canada thistle on Illustration Stations in Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan where the weed is bad.

1. Bare summer-fallow throughout the season.
2. June ploughed fallow cultivated several times followed by deep ploughing just before freeze-up.
3. Late fall ploughing of stubble land followed by late spring ploughing and the field seeded to barley.
4. Sweet clover for hay cut and removed to enable the land to be ploughed about mid-summer after which sufficient cultivation is given to keep down all thistle growth.

In theory, a perfectly bare summer-fallow for one complete season should choke out Canada thistle. In practice, however, it is a unusual season that will permit such a fallow to be maintained. For thorough work, the farmer must be prepared to cultivate every ten days all season. For the past three years a well worked fallow on the Roblin Illustration Station has grown more thistle in the subsequent grain crop than any other field in the series of rotations, and, this after early June ploughing and seven to ten cultivations.

At Pelly, in Saskatchewan, plan number two has been consistently followed for several years, but it is certainly no remedy and disproves the theory that deep ploughing just prior to freeze-up will kill Canada thistle. Plan number three is equally as impotent because between fall and spring ploughings the thistle roots remain dormant and are as virile as a potato set after a late crop of barley is sown.

Plan number four has been the most effective method used on Illustration Stations and is the plan to be most highly recommended. In competition with clover hay thistles exert every effort to develop normally. Subsequent to this effort the root system is seriously weakened by the time the hay is removed. Mid-summer mowing of the hay land followed by timely cultivation for the remainder of the season will do much to kill out the thistle roots. This system is used at Roblin and Pelly in a three-year rotation of first year wheat; second year, oats and barley seeded to clover; third year, hay and break. After two cycles of this rotation, land badly infested with thistle has become comparatively clean.

GREAT RESPONSIBILITIES OF CONFERENCE MEMBERS

The first Imperial Conference ever held outside the British Capital was open in Ottawa on July 21. The British Isles and all of the Dominions within the Empire will be represented at this conference where Imperial trade relations and other matters of prime importance to the British Commonwealth of Nations will be discussed. The business meetings of the conference will be held in the Parliament Buildings but the delegates will all make their headquarters at the Canadian National Chateau Laurier Hotel which is within sight of the House of Commons. The delegates to the conference represent a total population of 450,000,000 people and countries that occupy an area of 13,909,782 square miles, or about one quarter of the known surface of the globe. Of this population about 60,000,000 are whites. The remainder include 315,000,000 of the native races of Ceylon and India; 40,000,000 of the black races; 6,000,000 Arabs; 60,000,000 Malays; 1,000,000 Chinese and 1,000,000 Chinese and 1,000,000 Polyneans and various other elements. The religions represented include 210,000,000 Hindus; 100,000,000 Mohammedans; 80,000,000 Christians of which 67,000,000 are classed as Protestants; 12,000,000 Buddhists; 12,000,000 Animists; 4,000,000 Sikhs, Jain and Parsees; 750,000 Jews and the remainder Polythrista.

PLENTY OF CHERRIES THIS YEAR

According to early estimates by the Market Service of the Dominion Fruit Branch, the cherry crop in Ontario, British Columbia and other growing areas will be heavy this year. In all sections the trees came through the winter in excellent condition with practically no injury of any kind. In Ontario a plentiful supply of fruit buds are in evidence and increased production is almost certain. The Okanagan Valley, where there was a good fall of snow during the winter with consequent good moisture conditions, the Lower Fraser Valley, Vancouver Island and other cherry districts of British Columbia all hold promise of excellent crops. It is estimated that this year's cherry crop for the Province will be in the neighborhood of 95,500 crates, as compared with 85,600 last season. Present indications are that the British Columbia apricot crop will be slightly smaller than that of 1931, but of excellent quality.

WEBWORMS DO MAKE GOOD WEED KILLERS

Webworms will not eat wheat, and seldom touch oats or barley, according to a university bulletin received. When an army of them passes through a grain field, the caterpillars will destroy every weed in their line of march, and whatever harm they do elsewhere, they more than offset the damage by thoroughly cleaning grain fields of weeds.

This ought to be a good year for them, as the weeds are thriving along with the grain crops.

CALL FOR WEED POLICE

This is the time of the year when the rogues of the seed crop should be carefully watched—among the most troublesome of which are the weeds Bladder Campion, Catch Fly, Couch Grass, Rib Grass, Ragweed, Ox-eye Daisy and Perennial Sow Thistle—and only by effective policing methods can the best quality of seed crop be secured. As the Dominion Seed Branch points out; growers should police their fields carefully and be prepared to resort to liberal roguing where necessary in order to ensure that their seed crop will be free from impurities which too often render otherwise good seed of no more value whatever. Roguing, or pulling weeds by hand, before they have gone to seed, is the most effective method of making sure of securing a clean seed crop.

JUDGE WON'T PAY HIS INCOME TAX

Mr. Justice L. A. Cannon of the Supreme Court of Canada, has launched an appeal against an assessment made this year on his income on which taxes will be payable in 1933. In his appeal he challenges the right of the municipal assessment officer at Ottawa to assess the emoluments of a judge. "My fixed emoluments as one of His Majesty's judges cannot be taxed or reduced by an act of the legislature," he contends.

ALL MUST CARRY LIGHTS

An amendment to the vehicles act which came into force on July 1st provides that every vehicle other than a motor car shall, while in operation on a public highway, carry a red light on the rear, visible for 200 feet under normal conditions or a red reflecting device so placed as to be illuminated by the lights of an approaching vehicle. This red light must be carried during the period from sunset to one hour before sunrise and at all times when necessary owing to atmospheric conditions.

What Shall We Name the Baby?

A SYMPOSIUM BY INTERESTING PEOPLE OF TODAY

CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM A. LEWIN

To select a suitable name for each baby that comes into the world is, indeed, an absorbing problem. Nearly 2,000,000 new babies were born last year. And yet there are less than 1,000 names to choose from. Parents search telephone directories for suggestions. Shall we create some interesting new names?

Among my favorite names for boys—My favorite names for girls are William, James, Arthur, George, Margaret, Graciella, Maria, Eliza, and Raymond.

NO. 16—LUCREZIA BORI

WILLIAM is a name of Teutonic origin meaning "helmet of resolution." Its diminutives are Will, Willie and Bill. It is a name made famous by William Shakespeare, poet and dramatist; William Tell, Swiss patriot; William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania; William Makepeace Thackeray, famous Nineteenth Century British novelist.

"Father calls me William; sister calls me Will; Mother calls me Willie, but the fellows call me Bill."

HOT WEATHER RULES FOR BABY

More babies die during the month of September than during any other month of the year. Towards the end of summer, for one reason or another, many babies become ill and a number of them die because their powers of resistance seem lost as a result of repeated digestive upsets during July and August.

Summer is in many ways an ideal time for health as it provides sunshine and fresh air for us out-of-doors and so we are able to build up our health and energy. September is not a dangerous month for adults for indeed it is a particularly healthy time and the number of adult deaths for that month are comparatively few. It appears, therefore, that without becoming alarmists, special care should be given to babies during the summer months. There are some simple, common-sense rules which should be followed since they may save the baby's life and preserve his health.

Keep Him Cool

A good general rule is "the less clothing, the better" for cool days or nights add clothing. Babies dislike being overheated just as much as adults, and it is most undesirable in every way that the baby should be overheated.

Keep Him Clean

Keep him clean in every way. Bathe him night and morning, and on hot days, give a sponge bath in between. The bath is refreshing and quieting as well as cleansing.

Keep Flies Away

Flies and other insects carry disease germs and so the baby and his food should be protected from them by screening doors and windows.

Give Him Sunshine and Fresh Air

The great value of fresh air and sunshine is generally recognised. During the hot weather, the baby should have his sun bath in the morning before eleven or after three in the afternoon. Then he should be placed in the coolest spot available, this may be outside or in a well-ventilated shaded room.

Give Him Water

The baby requires more water when the weather is hot. Give him unsweetened cool water between feedings.

Give Food Regularly

Feed by the clock. The baby requires less food in hot weather, so he content if he takes less and do not force him to take more.

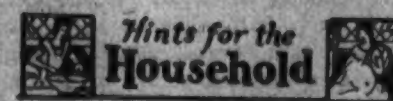

The breast-fed baby's chances of keeping well are much better than those of the bottle-fed. If the baby is bottle-fed, be sure that the milk is pasteurised and that the bottles are sterilised before filling and then kept on ice until used.

In case of illness, such as diarrhoea, stop all feeding, give cool unsweetened water and call the doctor. Prompt treatment is needed. Home remedies mean delay which is often dangerous.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

EARLY JELLIES

By Betty Barclay

Did you ever make cherry jelly? Nothing is so beautiful on a pantry shelf as a row of glasses gleaming with the clear, cherry red. But nature so generous in most things, was strangely negligent in supplying cherries with pectin, the substance which makes jelly "jelly." That's why cherry jelly has been so scarce and so hard to make. In these modern days, however, it is possible to make cherry jelly easily and with certainty of success. You simply add bottled fruit pectin, thus making up for Nature's lack. Try this cherry jelly recipe and be delighted.

Cherry Jelly

Any kind except wild or chokeberry,
3 cups (1½ lbs.) juice
6½ cups (2¾ cups.) sugar
1 bottle fruit pectin

To prepare juice, stem and crush 3 pounds fully ripe cherries. Do not pit. Add ½ cup water, bring to a boil, cover, and simmer 10 minutes. (For stronger cherry flavor, add ¼ teaspoon almond extract before pouring.) Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard for ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about nine 8-ounce glasses.

Black or Red Currant Jam
4 cups (2 lbs.) crushed fruit
¼ cup water
7½ cup (3¼ lbs.) sugar
½ bottle (¼ cup) fruit pectin

To prepare fruit, crush thoroughly or grind about 2 pounds fully ripe fruit and measure it into a large kettle. Add ¼ cup water, and stir until mixture boils. (With black currants, add ¼ cup water.) Simmer, covered, 15 minutes. Add sugar, mix well, and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in fruit pectin. Skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jam at once. Makes about eleven 8-ounce glasses.

FRUIT JUICES FOR COLD WEATHER USE

By Anne Schuyler

Put up fruit juices now for use next winter—for beverages, gelatin desserts, pudding sauces, or sherbets. Their flavor will be appreciated in the cold weather months, as will also the quick energy value of the sugar which is used so liberally in preserving them. Try these recipes this year and they will be favorites with you always.

Blueberry Juice

Add sufficient cold water to the berries to allow them to float. Simmer them slowly until they lose their shape. Strain off the juice as for jelly. Measure the juice and heat it. To each quart add one cup sugar. Boil for five minutes. Skim. Seal in hot, clean bottles or jars.

Rhubarb Juice

Rhubarb juice is particularly valuable for fruit beverages, and for combining with other fruit juices to lend tartness to jellies. It is also good for jellied desserts and pudding sauces. It may be prepared from the stalks that have become too tough to cook in other ways.

Cut the rhubarb in small pieces, add just enough water to cover and simmer until very soft. Strain the juice through a jelly bag. To each quart of juice add two cups sugar. Heat until the sugar is dissolved. Skim. Bring to the boiling point. Seal in clean, hot jars or bottles.

C. L. Day, publisher of the Eureka (Calif.) Standard says:

"There is a reader interest to the newspaper that does not attach to any other form of advertising. The newspaper, by virtue of delivering to the advertiser something he cannot buy in any other form, i.e., entree into the home as an invited guest, is (1) selling service of a highly technical character; (2) a reader confidence gained only at an enormous capital investment and risk."

"The circular stuffed into the mail box or thrown onto the lawn is an uninvited visitor, resented by the tidy housewife. It has not the stability, dignity, nor character of the newspaper behind it—only the reputation of the merchant distributing it. It therefore fails to appeal to the very class the merchant seeks to interest, i.e., the individual not a regular customer."

"The newspaper is a welcome visitor in practically every home in every community. The newspaper page is the ideal advertising space. The reader is accustomed to look to the newspaper for the newest in wanted merchandise, and for the merchant to create an interest in merchandise is half the sale."

"Newspaper advertising is the least expensive, most direct, and most productive of all methods of contacting the buying public."

RED SCARE

Pell Street was an Indian trail before it was Pell Street. The temperamental bear, the timber wolf, the puma and the painted Mohawk stalked along it in those dim times. That unnamed Pell Street of the wilderness trail knew the fierce, swift sounds of struggle; the frightened eyes of the hunted, the calculating, determined eyes of the hunter.

Bart Farwell was a hunter. His eyes were calculating and determined his weapon was a billy, which he carried in his pistol pocket. He was stalking his prey along Pell Street.

He stalked with a technique as well adapted to his environment as was the Mohawk's to his. Bart did not crawl on his stomach beside the boles of trees because there are no trees on Pell Street; he walked upright and in the midst of a crowd of people who did not notice him, because they were intent on other prey such as insurance buyers, clients, bargain counters or getting home to dinner.

The name of Bart Farwell's particular prey was Nick Murinski, who was himself a hunter. Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, between the hours of four and five in the afternoon, Nick hunted along Pell Street for people who would purchase his powerful alkaloid cocaine, at the price of one dollar the deck.

Perhaps Nick Murinski was a throwback from the unwindowed, untraffic-signalized Pell Street of the forest, for he looked, smelled and behaved a good deal like that ugly, nauseating, carrion-eating animal, the wolverine. Besides, he looked as though he would be a handy fellow if you wanted a murder done; but his police record was: "Dope peddler—source of supply unknown." It was to find the source of this supply that Farwell had been following the man.

Bart Farwell did not look like a forest animal. He had been raised on pavement. The only time he had been off pavement for any considerable time was when he was in the mud of northern France, an experience which had bewildered him and taken away most of his hair and three fingers from his right hand. It had left him, however, a straight nose projecting from between a couple of brown eyes and ending in a smile, a set of muscles that were not less than the ancient Mohawk's, and a very determined nature.

As he walked along, about a rope's length of Nick, he was thinking that, if he could find out who killed Sir Ambrose Cross, he might be promoted from the status of plain clothes man to that of detective.

"If that were to come to pass," he observed to himself, "I could afford to ask Mary-Alice to marry me." Sir Ambrose Cross had been stabbed to death three weeks before in his bedroom. Valuables had been taken from the house and a red flag left.

Bart's mind went back and forth over the details. The murder seemed to be connected with a number of robberies of wealthy homes in the city, for in every case a red flag had been left behind. In the case of Sir Ambrose Cross, the thief had apparently been apprehended; there had been a struggle.

The newspapers were still featuring it. The whole police force was being criticized; some heads might fall if no results were forthcoming. "If I could get him," thought Bart, "the chief would certainly give me a better job."

Bart was a good plain-clothes man. After he had been in a district for a year or two, the people who broke bread by breaking the law were inclined to move to another district. Then he would be moved after them. In this way, he had been in four different districts since the war. He knew by their first names hundreds and hundreds of stool pigeons, dips, dopes, crackmen and purveyors of anything from a bottle of sour beer to a woman. Besides, he knew a lot of women.

"But not a word out of any of them about Sir Ambrose. It just seems that they don't know who knocked him off." The police force, he considered, was helpless unless it could get tips. "That's what gives me such a good chance this time. If there aren't tips somebody has to do some real sleuthing. I'm a smart guy. I'll do it."

The two-man procession had now arrived at a part of Pell Street where a sign hung over the sidewalk and announced that:

SANDY MACGREGOR SELLS & BOARDS DOGS

This store contained all of Bart Farwell's weaknesses—dogs and Mary-Alice.

He glanced in and saw the girl. She wore a plain dress but her very feminine body made it seem ornamented with lace and fro-fros. She was standing with her back to the door, talking with the proprietor, "Sandy" MacGregor. Bart noted that they were standing very close together, in a juxtaposition more of lovers than of employer and employee. He sighed and continued his hunting of Nick Murinski.

"Nick may be working under the red flag," he thought; but it did not occur to him that this Nick might have committed the murder.

At the next corner, he was relieved by Jones of the regular narcotic squad. After his long stretch on duty, he turned away, glad to have the time for his own private investigation of the Cross murder. But, as he looked back at Nick, who was being quickly inundated by the crowd, he had a feeling that he was leaving behind him the solution of the mystery. However, he left Pell Street and hurried to number three police station. "Nothing new," the sergeant told him.

"But the red scare hasn't quieted down any," said Gleason of the Monitor, who had dropped in on his rounds. "There's even some talk of forming a citizen's vigilance committee."

They all knew Bart was trying to pull something off on his own and they all hoped he would pull it off. Bart was a sound fellow.

He went over and began to comb that part of the ward that came within his district.

"Funny, a three-weeks-old murder still being remembered?" said the Chicago "Sphinx" whom he accosted in the back of Levine's pool room.

"Oh yeah; and it's funnier how it's remembered around here about you breaking and entering Bray's drug store that time. We still have all the evidence, see! Now, who knocked off this Cross guy?"

"Don't know, Bart."

The plain-clothes man went down into a cellar which was under a basement. Then he questioned a man who wore trousers without any seat to them and who was eating pig's brains for dinner. This man said that he did not know who might have killed Sir Ambrose Cross.

little man who made your nose bleed, he probably has a wife, somewhere," Ellen said.

A knowing little twinkle crept into her husband's eyes.

"He'll be separated from her some time," said Jim Mellish. "Perhaps he wished something of the sort when the Conjugial Kiss was in his pocket."

He laughed hastily and walked about the room, whistling softly. But his eyes flickered. Ellen realized that they would be warm and twinkling long after they were both as old as Dadada and Mamma Sibley.

The door opened. Trevor's Mr. Adkins entered, with a ceremonious bow.

"My dear sir, may I congratulate you and express our deep indebtedness?"

"GO WEST, YOUNG MAN—"

It would appear that the youth of America is "sold" on the Kth Olympiad. More than a fair percentage of the Americans seen at the Games will be young men of college age. Not only will a great many of the actual contestants be American collegiates, but many of the representatives of large enterprises sent by their respective companies will be men not long out of our institutions of learning.

Those boys not fortunate enough to have some one behind them to pay their way are seeking curious and devious ways to reach the West Coast. Some have made arrangements to work their way over on boats, still others plan to "hitch-hike" across country, and at least one youth has already successfully "bummed" his way over entirely by airplane!

The foreign visitors to our shores should not be disappointed in the appearance and vitality of these eager representatives.
